Old Harmony Graveyard The oldest graveyard in present-day Greeneville, the oldest tombstone dates back to the 1700s. A stone marker on the graveyard’s Circuit Court clerk from 1810 until 1854 is buried here, as well as Robert Brown, the first settler of Greeneville and McDonald Lincoln, a cousin of Abraham Lincoln. The upper corner is called the “chiseler section” because, in 1875, when some栀tasonic tines were dug and people were buried there when they were dying faster than graves could be dug.
